U.S. CENSUS BUREAU BEGINS RECRUITING FOR EARLY PHASES OF 2010 CENSUS

Thousands of people needed to begin Census operations

Preliminary operations leading up to the count are at full swing. Census 2010 offices are recruiting now.

The next stage of Census operations requires hundreds of people to visit homes, apartments and other dwellings to verify locations of housing units. Verifying addresses and updating address lists in 2009 will improve our accuracy when mailing questionnaires and contacting individuals in the year 2010.

“It takes a large number of qualified individuals to take an accurate census,” said Cathy Illian, Denver Regional Census Director. “We are looking for part-time or full-time employees, people who know their local area and who’s work can make a difference for their community for years to come.”

The Census Bureau emphasizes hiring local people because of their knowledge of the people and the area. Applicants should be 18 years old or older and U.S. citizens. Applicants must take a written test of basic skills and pass a security check.
