Clark County District Attorney's Office Welcomes Andryanna Sheppard as New Public Information Officer

The Clark County District Attorney's Office is proud to announce the appointment of Andryanna "Andy" Sheppard as its new Public Information Officer, where she will lead media relations, public outreach, and communications strategy for the office.

Andy brings nearly a decade of experience in investigative journalism, multimedia storytelling, and strategic communications. Before joining the DA's Office, she served as an Investigative Reporter at FOX5 Las Vegas and Consumer Investigative Reporter at WINK News in Fort Myers, Fla. in both broadcast and digital media, producing award-winning content that informed and empowered local communities. Her work has reached audiences across the country and included extensive coverage of public safety, consumer protection, and community rebuilding efforts.

In her new role, Andy will oversee the development and implementation of the District Attorney's public information and engagement initiatives. Her priorities include expanding the office's digital presence and highlighting the important work of staff through meaningful storytelling.

"We're excited to have Andy join our team and lead our communications with compassion, creativity and professionalism," said District Attorney Steve Wolfson. "Her experience connecting communities to information during fast-paced events will be an asset to our office and Clark County."

Andy earned her Bachelor of Arts in Broadcast and Electronic Communication Arts and has built a reputation for creative, audience-centered communications and storytelling that drives understanding and trust. She is passionate about making government communication accessible and transparent.

"I'm honored to serve in this role and to help tell the stories behind the important work being done every day on behalf of Clark County residents," Sheppard said. "This office plays a vital role in the community, and I look forward to helping strengthen that connection."
